HON 341

Food: Gender, Power, & Change

Women chefs, farmers, and brewers are making their mark in an industry historically dominated by men. This course explores the growth of women leaders in the food industry within the context of change in the industry overall.

Students will interview change-makers in Maine’s food industry, placing their interview findings within the broader social, cultural, and historical landscape. As a class, we will consider what students’ interview findings reveal about gender, power, and change in the food industry today.

Wednesdays 1:00–3:50pm with Dr Amy Blackstone